

Monday, June 19, we remember and celebrate Juneteenth, acknowledging both the importance of this day as the day in American history when the promise of freedom for every man, woman, and child reached the last of our nation's enslaved people in 1865 and the distance we have yet to go in the pursuit of justice for Black Americans. This historically under-taught, under-recognized holiday aligns with the core values and dedication we hold dear in Head Start: ensuring that every child, regardless of their circumstances at birth, has the opportunity to thrive. In celebration of this day, children and staff wore red and treated to a lunch consisting of beef sausage, beans corn bread and red jello
